Says Displaced Jew Is Problem Of All

The only solution for the problem of the homeless, stateless Jews of Europe is the immediate admission of at least 100,000 of them to Palestine, Henry Morgenthau Jr., former U.S. Secretary of the Treasury, said in New York in an address at a dinner in his honor at the Hotel Astor, under the auspices of the Bnai Brith.

Mr. Morgenthau said that the problem of the displaced Jew was not the sole concern of any nation, or of any small group of nations. He said that it was the responsibility of all the peoples who fought Fascism and won a new opportunity for democracy.

"Therefore the whole question of the future of Palestine should be placed under the auspices of the United Nations Organization," he said. "This was the kind of procedure most people had in mind when they acclaimed the result of the San Francisco Conference as a long step toward peace. We felt that at last we had an organization big enough to do the really big job.

"If we are to tread the path of peace, we must get used to working with the machinery of peace. Such a resettlement as I have proposed, such a use of the right of self-determination, can only be achieved by the joint determination and common efforts of all free peoples. A world problem must have behind its solution the force of a world authority. Only so can we achieve the goal of justice and freedom for which we have fought and for which we know in our hearts we must continue to fight, replacing the weapons of war with the weapons of peace."

Harry Monsky, president of Bnai Brith, presented a gold medallion to Mr. Morgenthau in recognition of outstanding efforts [illegible] the presentation was Henry Morgenthau Sr., former Ambassador to Turkey, who received a similar award from Bnai Brith thirty years ago. Others who joined in paying tribute to Mr. Morgenthau were Attorney General Clark, Postmaster General Robert E. Hannegan, Senator Robert F. Wagner and Senator Charles W. Tobey of New Hampshire.

Another feature of the evening was the presentation to Miss Joan Morgenthau daughter of the guest of honor, an order for six specially-designed wheel chairs of a new type, which are to be given to Welfare Bond Hospital by the Bnai Brith Women of Washington, in honor of Mrs. Morgenthau.

Mr. Morgenthau said that the associated survivors of the "displaced persons" in Germany were dying by the hundreds, and would be dying by the thousands before mid-winter, unless efforts on their behalf were redoubled. He said that their restoration and rehabilitation was one of the prime responsibilities of the United Nations.

"I have been profoundly disturbed, as I know you have, to realize that our responsibility has not been discharged any too well," Mr. Morgenthau said. "The Harrison report, with its evidence that the lot of displaced persons had been little improved since liberation from Nazi rule, was a shock, but a wholesome shock. President Truman promptly forwarded a copy to General Eisenhower with strongly worded instructions to remedy the situation. The general undertook personal inspection tours, and within a few weeks reported to the President that conditions had been materially improved. We can hope that the improvement will continue."

Declaring that eventually the full burden of caring for the displaced persons would have to be shouldered by the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, Mr. Morgenthau said that much of the criticism of UNRRA came from critics who did not understand the limitations imposed on it. He deplored the failure of Congress to appropriate funds to fulfill the pledge of the United States to UNRRA.

Referring to the stipulation imposed by the U.S. House of Representatives that American funds could be expended only in countries that permit representatives of the American press to observe conditions freely, Mr. Morgenthau said that the House had failed to realize that it was not appropriating for

Retires As Truman Adviser

Samuel I. Rosenman, a member of the original Roosevelt "brain trust," is retiring as special counsel to President Truman at the end of the year. He gave up a $25,000-a-year job as a justice of the Supreme Court in New York to come to Washington Oct. 1, 1943, to take the specially created White House post of chief counsel.

Now, at 49, he is anxious to get back to the practice of law in New York City, he said, and reestablish himself in private life.

In a letter acknowledging Justice Rosenman's agreement to remain until after victory over Japan, President Truman spoke of his "self-effacing zeal and patriotic devotion," and added that he had done his work with "seldom, if ever, any public credit or acclaim."

"Some day, when accurate history is written, you will receive the credit which is due," the President added.

Some months ago the White House announced that Justice Rosenman is going back to New York to resume the practice of law."

As he had done for the late President Roosevelt, Justice Rosenman played an important part in the drafting of Mr. Truman's Presidential speeches and of other important White House papers.

But it was as the confidant of the former President that Justice Rosenman was best known. They became friends when the man from Hyde Park first ran for Governor in 1928 and became his counsel. When Franklin D. Roosevelt came to the White House, Mr. Rosenman went to the New York Supreme Court.

During his services on the bench, he often was called upon by the President for advice on governmental matters. Later, during the war, Justice Rosenman was instrumental in devising plans for setting up the Office of War Information, the War Production Board, the War Manpower Commission and the Office of Strategic Services.

As Mr. Roosevelt's emissary, he discussed with the British the original arrangements for the war criminal trials in Germany.

Say British Policy Defrauds Jews

The Zionist Organization of America, meeting in Atlantic City, adopted a militant economic and political program as it endorsed a proposal for the purchase of 500,000 additional acres of land in Palestine and unanimously elected Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver of Cleveland as its president for the ensuing year to succeed Dr. Israel Goldstein of New York.

The convention adopted a resolution declaring that the present position of the British Government was the culmination of a policy intended to "defraud the Jewish people of its established rights in Palestine." The resolution added that the convention held the United States Government to the "solemn pledges of both parties and the pronouncements of the Presidents of the United States"; that its members relied upon the support of millions of fellow-Americans, and that "no effort shall be spared to achieve for our people liberty and security in Palestine as a free and democratic Jewish commonwealth.

The delegates to the forty-eighth annual convention of the organization voted, in defiance of the Pal-

British Soldiers' Restraint Praised

There were protest meetings all over Palestine and at Hebrew University 600 students condemned the "treacherous policy" of the Bevin statement.

Following a reminder to extremists that possession of arms was punishable by life imprisonment and use of them by death, the Palestine Government tightened its emergency regulations by widening the powers of police and soldiers to search for and arrest illegal immigrants.

Henceforth any member of the British forces and any head man of a village may arrest without a warrant any person "reasonably" suspected of being an illegal immigrant. In similar cases, officers of the army and police may enter any premises, place, vehicle, vessel or airplane where there was reason to believe illegal immigrants were hiding.

Jewish newspapers unanimously praised British troops and police as having shown considerable restraint in face of what was called trying provocation, such as stoning, during the Tel Aviv disorders. Without exception, the newspapers disassociated respectable Jews from what were called hooligans.

British officers and men of the Sixth Airborne Division appear to consider their task more unpleasant than the fighting in North Africa, France and Germany.

Brig. G. W. Lathbury, who commanded the first parachute brigade at Arnhem, said:

"I was extremely impressed by the conduct of men in face of unusual difficulties. I know my men disliked it intensely. What happened in Tel Aviv involved humanitarian considerations. It has been most difficult to insure that no one is hurt except those who deserve it."

[illegible] Rev. [illegible] to Jewish leaders as aid in restoring order and enforcing observance of the curfew to avoid new clashes.

Mayor Rokach plastered Tel Aviv with placards condemning "irresponsible elements" for a "breach of discipline." His proclamation was broadcast at intervals over the radio.

The Jewish Agency for Palestine and the Jewish National Council voluntarily issued proclamations condemning "riff-raff," which they held responsible for the outbreaks.

Dispatches emphasized that the rioters were youths, including girls.

Arabs Protest Film On Palestine

The Arab Office in London sent a letter of protest to Ambassador John G. Winant of the United States against The March of Time film on Palestine which has been released in Britain. The protest says that the film misrepresents the Arabs and their case in a manner to arouse contempt for and antipathy toward them and is liable to harm traditional American-Arab friendship.

The letter to the Ambassador said that the Arab Office had also protested to The March of Time but officials at the company's offices in New York said it had not received any protest and refused comment.

The Arab Office also has directed the matter to the attention of the British Government, saying that the film would have repercussions in Palestine, if shown there.

Richard de Rochemont, production chief of The March of Time, declared in New York that the film, "Palestine Problem," had not aroused any adverse comment during its recent Broadway showing at the Roxy Theatre and that it was an unbiased account of what the Jews have done toward establishing a "homeland" for themselves in Palestine.

"We consider the film a real objective and impartial document," he said. "In the future we hope to do a film on the Arab State, and at that time we will be happy to set forth what the Arabs have done and may hope to do."

Mr. de Rochemont said that the film's director, Jean Pages, a Frenchman, and the cameraman, Robert Alonso y Navarro, had spent much time in making the picture and had been "well received in Arab homes."

JEWISH STATE BARRED IN U.S.-BRITISH PLAN OF TRUSTEESHIP FOR PALESTINE

An agreement between the United States and Britain that will lead to a Joint Committee of Inquiry into the whole problem of European Jews and Palestine was announced in London on November 13 by Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin in the House of Commons.

Palestine is to become a trustee state of the United Nations Organization and in time will have self-government as a Palestinian, not Jewish, state, Mr. Bevin said at a conference with American correspondents after he had made his statement to the Commons.

The agreement for a joint inquiry, announced also in Washington by President Truman, was construed as a British rejection of his pleas for the immediate issuance of 100,000 Palestine entry permits. It was attacked by Senator Kenneth McKellar, Representative Sol. Bloom and a spokesman for rabbis who marched in the capital to petition for aid to Jewish refugees.

Palestine Jews reacted immediately to the Bevin statement. They called for a general stoppage of all work, trade and traffic and imposed a voluntary curfew to avoid clashes. Arab leaders seemed disappointed by the statement.

The Foreign Secretary's appeal — and he made it with all the passion at his command — was to regard Jewry apart from Zionists, about whom he spoke with some bitterness. A major aim of both his formal statement and his informal remarks was to place the Palestine issue in the far greater framework of what he termed the racial problem of the whole Middle East.

That the United States should have agreed to take joint responsibility for studying this whole problem and making recommendations has brought great satisfaction to the British. This "instrument of policy" represents a turning point in the history of the Middle East.

The British retain their mandate over Palestine pending a decision on the recommendations of new Committee of Inquiry and its ultimate disposition as a trustee State of the UNO. As Mr. Bevin emphasized, the British will maintain order and will not yield to force.

They intend to maintain the present monthly rate of 1,500 Jewish immigrants to Palestine beyond the limits of the 1939 White Paper.

Protest Borough Petition To Deport Refugees In Britain

The meeting convened by the Hampstead branch of the Left Book Club at Trinity Church Hall, Finchley Road, London, England, to protest against the petition for the deportation of the refugees living in the borough was very lively and there were many interruptions, particularly when Miss Eleanor Rathbone, M.P., spoke, reports the London Jewish Chronicle.

The Chairman, the Rev. T. Chalmers Lyon, read a message from Dr. Joad. It read: "I am wholly in sympathy with the 'Protest Against Prejudice' meeting. Prejudice against human beings because of their race or nationality seems to me to be one of the distinguishing characteristics of that very creed against which we have been fighting. Fascism with all its beastliness is not the prerogative of any one country. Its first beginnings are often hard to detect. But this petition, I think, is one of them. Let us have no truck with it."

"And I say that Joad is talking rot," yelled someone from the back of the hall, [illegible]

There was a large overflow meeting outside the hall, because hundreds of people were unable to get in.

Ernest Cove, Secretary of the Refugees Industries Committee, quoting official figures, said that there were 19,000 refugees in Hampstead, not 28,000 to 30,000 as alleged by the petitionists.

"There is a danger that this thing will spread," warned Mr. Cove. It might not finish with turning out the refugees from Hampstead and out of Great Britain. It might finish with the English being turned out of China, Egypt, and India.

"What have we fought the war for?" asked Miss F. L. Josephy. They had defeated Fascism — so they said. But she believed they were in very grave danger, and the Allies as a whole were, of practising themselves that very ideology that they went into the war to eradicate.

Men who think of tomorrow are planning self-reading books, uninterrupted symphonies

Your radio-phonograph of tomorrow will bring you complete novels, dramas and symphonies magnetically impressed on small spools of steel wire. Hours of entertainment will be provided by a single spool no larger than your hand. And on spools of "blank wire" you will be able to make your own recordings—to keep permanently or to "wipe clean" for re-use any time you wish!

Yes, your Victory Bonds will buy greater pleasures and comforts tomorrow!

Men who think of tomorrow say

"HOLD ON TO YOUR VICTORY BONDS TODAY"

NO ONE can repeal the law of supply and demand. But we can make it work our way by holding on to Victory Bonds bought to finance our nation at war.

Here's why: For many months consumer goods will continue to be scarce. Bidding for these goods with our extra dollars, thus driving prices up, only serves to devalue all of our personal wealth, and that of the nation.

By leaving our extra money in safe keeping with our government—for repayment when conditions have become normal—we automatically keep prices down and maintain the law of supply and demand in balance.

That's why your Victory Bonds may save you twice what you've invested in them—if you hold on to them now. When tempted to cash them in—think of tomorrow!

The Displaced Jews Of Europe Turn This Way For Help

By Suzanne F. Cohen

Raymond Arthur Davies, of Toronto, Russian correspondent for Toronto Saturday Night, who is also working for the Jewish Immigrant Aid Society and the Canadian Jewish Congress in Russia, spoke before a luncheon board meeting of the J.I.A.S. in Montreal, on his return from Russia. He told of his work in collecting names of displaced persons for the J.I.A.S., and the Canadian Location Service; and described the condition of Jews in Eastern European countries, which is the subject of a book he has just written. He was introduced by S. Guttman, national president, and thanked by Benjamin Robinson, K.C., past-president, of the Immigrant Aid.

Mr. Davies, who was on a lecture tour in Canada nearly a year ago, has lost some of his jauntiness in the interim, doubtless due to his month-long trip to New York, from Moscow, made via Istanbul, Turkey. It couldn't have been a lack of food, because he said that rations allowed to correspondents in Russia included ten pounds of sugar a month, although last year there was none available at all, and fourteen pounds of meat a month, both better than the distribution here, as some one at the luncheon muttered wistfully. Not as husky, but still as charming as previously reported in this paper, Mr. Davies wore a navy-blue business suit, with a white shirt, maroon-red handkerchief in the breast pocket; a fancy maroon and blue printed tie, and a Canadian Legion pin, for service in the war.

Mr. Davies spoke also to a meeting at Montreal High School, under the auspices of the Canadian Federation of Russian Jews, and the United Jewish People's Order, stressing the help that should go to Europe's displaced Jews from Jews in Canada and the United States, the only remaining Jewish communities which are substantially able to provide somewhat for the Jewish refugees of Europe.

In his speech at the luncheon meeting, Mr. Davies paid the most attention to the present attitudes of the peoples and governments in Poland, Rumania, Yugoslavia, and Russia towards the Jews. He had been in these countries, assembling lists of their displaced Jews from government agencies, and collating the names of relatives through Europe, and in the United States and Canada whom these people were seeking. He had cabled these lists to the Jewish Immigrant Aid here, as he received them; and in turn, the J.I.A.S. made them available to the Canadian Location Service, affiliated with itself and the Canadian Jewish Congress. "I have rarely derived such pleasure in my life as I did by doing this work," he said. While he is away, a Czech-Jewish girl, Dagmar Stein, is continuing it for him in Russia.

Mr. Davies emphasized the restlessness and hopelessness of those Jews who do not know where the rest of their families may be, and whose transient way of living is saddened by this uncertainty. Their attitude to living, and their way of life, would be changed considerably, he said, if this ceaseless searching were ended or relieved.

"I don't want to tell horrible stories," Mr. Davies said, but he spoke of the Warsaw ghetto with [illegible] the people, who have lost their last living links, sitting there, knowing that they can be remembered only by cable. What he said was enough to portray the desolation.

Even after the Nazis had declared the Warsaw ghetto free of Jews, twenty-three thousand still managed to survive. "These people should be given a chance," he urged. "Send them machines, tools, raw materials." He reiterated then what he had put forward as a strong point in speaking in Montreal last year: that these thousands were living only because they had been saved by non-Jews.

Poland is considered a stepping-off point, Mr. Davies said, whence Jews try to go to other points of Europe, to Africa, or the Americas, and he added that the anti-Semitism there is deep and virulent. According to him, the Polish government is "honest and good". It is fighting to counteract the demonstrations of anti-Semitism, manifesting itself in semi-pogroms, for instance, and to provide punishment and trial when they occur.

Of Rumania, Mr. Davies said that the Jews would like to emigrate, but are not able to. "Rumanian Jews will have to go back to the land," he surmised bluntly, adding that they must abandon thoughts of making a living in business. In Yugoslavia, where fifteen percent of the total population was lost, one way or another, during the war, there was a Jewish division among the Partisans. There is very little anti-Semitism there, according to the speaker. And he could have added that only about fifteen percent of the Jewish pre-war population is left, due to slaughter by the Germans.

Mr. Davies mentioned that he had always considered himself as a Canadian, [illegible] Jew, and that [illegible] had not always been so very strong. However, when he described the status of Jews in Russia, he reported on them lyrically, as he told of how much he had been moved by their religious and cultural freedom, and its expression. The three and a half million Jews there are outstanding, he said, and he was proud to meet them. "The Jews in [illegible], a country, or nowhere else," he said. "They have a free, growing culture which is appreciated and shared by the other peoples in the Soviet Union."

Mr. Davies saw a play produced at the Jewish Theatre, in Moscow, recreating the old way of Jewish life, before an audience which was half made up of non-Jews. Jewish dances and songs, "done with artistry and feeling, and drawing from the past," as he put it, were applauded until the theatre shook. At the quarters of the Jewish Anti-Fascist Committee in Moscow, he sang Yiddish songs and drank vodka with Russian Jewish leaders of every type and in every field.

A Russian commission has been set up to compile lists for locating Jewish refugees, and connecting them up for help from other countries. Mr. Davies urged that every one who has relatives in Russia should send them parcels of articles they could use—food, clothing, medicines. They need everything conducive to comfort, health, and general well-being.

"Is it possible that our brethren in America have forgotten us?" Dr. Emil Sommerstein, leader of the Polish Jews, asked Mr. Davies in Warsaw. Mr. Davies' reply, given to the J.I.A.S. meeting, was that the Jews of the world should consider their responsibilities more than they ever have before. He says he is not a Zionist, and does not offer Palestine as the answer, except as a place to settle Europe's displaced persons. What he does insist on is this: "The struggle against anti-Semitism is a problem for every Jew." The way to help, he added, is to fight against anti-Semitism here even more than ever, and that work against anti-Semitism anywhere affects anti-Semitism all over the world.

Mr. Davies has met the young people of Europe, grown old too soon, and he has seen the gas-chambers and the mass funeral pyres; the piles of corpses above and the bones of the dead victims of Jew hatred. His last words were: "If we stop fighting, we annihilate ourselves, and with us the world, because we are the salvation."

PROTEST

sort of people they ought to get rid of, not the refugees, she urged.

Miss Eleanor Rathbone, M.P., said that she would not like this shocking, ugly, and selfish movement to go on without joining her voice with the protest against the petition. Who were these aliens whom these people wanted to expel? Where did they want them to go to? And what did they expect to become of them? A great many of those who came to England as refugees were Jews.

"German agents," yelled someone.

"Do you want to drive out the Jews because they are Jews?" she asked. (Voice: "They are Germans.")

"You begin with something that is very cruel and you end with something that is so bestial as expulsion," Miss Rathbone continued.

Where did they want to send these people? Did they want to send them back to Germany, she asked? (Voices: "Yes.")

"Do you realise what is happening in Germany?" she asked her interrupters.

There was some disorder when Miss Rathbone said that Hampstead was well situated in the matter of housing and had no overcrowding or slums.

"Where do you want them to go?" she asked.

Someone said: "What about America?" To which Miss Rathbone retorted that America had a large body of selfish people in it — almost as selfish as the people who raised this petition (loud applause).

Continuing, she asked why did they think that Great Britain should adopt this horrible policy of driving out the aliens? There was not a country in Europe that had got such a small alien population relatively to the rest of the population as England had.

Did they realise, she asked, the immense value which these refugees had been to them, and that shortly before the war 500 separate industries had been started by refugee industrialists in this country? A census taken by the Government only last year had shown that of the foreigners who were able to work in England 88 per cent were doing work of national importance (applause).

"What percentage of Jews fought in the war?" asked someone.

Might he answer that question? asked Victor Gollancz, and told the questioner that the figure was 13 per cent, as against 10 per cent of Englishmen.

H. N. Brailsford told the meeting that while the alien population in France was 7 per cent, in Holland it was 2 per cent, in England it was only decimal four, less than half of one per cent. When Mr. Brailsford referred to the fact that 88 per cent of the refugees had been doing useful work throughout the war, someone yelled out: "And black-marketing."

Victor Gollancz said that they were facing a crisis which might lead them either to the re-establishment of humanity and civilisation or to the total destruction of civilisation. Hitler, he reminded his audience, had said that selfishness was a good thing, that downing the foreigner was a good thing, that being murderous and tough was a good thing, and he had very largely converted the world to that doctrine even in the moment of his defeat. Everybody throughout the world was playing for his own hand. If this went on there could not be any possible hope of salvation from the atomic bomb or the prevention of another war. There was only one hope, and that was that in this desperate crisis they should all in their individual lives learn to put the common good before their own narrow interests and to put mercy against narrow racialism and nationalism which they had fought against (applause).

Miss Rathbone told the meeting that Mr. Churchill had said that owing to the policy of Hitler driving out the Jews, science in England had gone definitely ahead of German science.

The Vicar of Holy Trinity Church, the Rev. D. W. Cleverley Ford, said he was against the petition because it was contrary to reason, contrary to decent behaviour, and because, speaking in his capacity, it was contrary to the principles of the Christian faith (loud applause).

The chairman told the opposition that they ought to be thoroughly ashamed of themselves to have put their names to the petition.

He then read a counter-petition praying the House of Commons to disregard the first petition. The counter-petition was extensively signed.

Eighty-five minority groups in Denver, comprising all liberal elements in the city have united in the Denver Unity Council to combat outbreaks of anti-minority violences and racial and religious discrimination.

CANADA UNLIMITED — The Formative Years

A Lawn Social of the 1840's — by Jack Martin O.S.A., C.P.E.

The Gracious Sociability of the Past

IT IS NOT LONG—not greatly beyond living memory—that the idea of responsible government took root in the fabric of this forming nation.

Look back through the swiftly turning years. Picture the lawn social of the middle 1840's, years when restless minds and burning energies were forming the mould of a "Canada Unlimited" . . . Milady voluminously gowned, is still mildly shocked at the idea that the governor should bow to the wishes of an elected assembly. Her top-hatted consort, too, is probably vaguely troubled at this new notion of freedom. Nonetheless, it is the spirit of the time.

A pioneer land is getting ready to become a Nation. Men of enterprise like Eugene O'Keefe are laying the cornerstones of ventures yet to grow great. There's an awakening realization of latent power. Canadians are seeing a vision—of a Canada Unlimited.

These hundred years have justified that vision! Through prosperity, through adversity, through smiling years of peace and troubled years of war a Canada Unlimited has emerged. And the next hundred? The will is there. The men and women, the power and the resources are there to make a greater land than was ever dreamed of.

1846 — One of a series depicting the growth of Canada as a nation, produced by O'Keefe's on the occasion of their 100th anniversary. — 1946

And to each of us in this year of grace comes an opportunity to re-affirm our faith in the future by our purchase and holding of Victory Bonds and War Savings Certificates.

Oil And Compromise In Palestine

Freda Kirchway, writing in The Nation, says:

Clearly the British have a right to demand that we do more than give advice on the administration of the Middle East.

But American participation will not automatically insure a more courageous, decent policy. Formally we are jointly responsible for Allied policy in Greece and in Italy; in practice, the policy is British. In Palestine we may merely find ourselves used as a cover for a slightly modified policy of Arab appeasement. This is the role we have cheerfully played in Syria and Lebanon.

America is profoundly committed to support of a Jewish National Home in Palestine. Our policy was first announced by President Wilson in 1919 and has been repeated by every President since then; it was endorsed in a resolution unanimously adopted by Congress in 1922 and embodied in the United States-British convention on Palestine ratified by the Senate in 1925. Never have we receded from this position. Indeed, it was stated with explicit emphasis in both party platforms in 1944 and restated by President Roosevelt last October. America is committed.

But today, when the surviving, homeless fragments of Europe's Jewish community are clamoring for admission to Palestine, a curious and new note has crept into official statements in Washington. We are sorry for Europe's Jews, certainly; but it is one thing to care decently for the survivors, to find places of refuge for them, in Palestine if possible, or indeed almost anywhere except in America; it is another to follow a policy which will create difficulties with the Arabs.

The exchange of letters between Ibn Saud and President Roosevelt sounded the new note too clearly to be misinterpreted; even if the President believed that his promise of consultations with the Arabs implied no retreat from his pledged policy, it carried that implication to the Arab leaders and stiffened their resistance. And the reiteration of his words by Secretary Byrnes has had the same effect.

Since then they have redoubled their threats and stepped up their demands. They now not only warn us that war will follow any attempt to set up a Jewish state in Palestine, but openly — much worse because much more convincing — they threaten to refuse the oil and refinery agreements now under negotiation with American firms. And in this threat one can discern a reason both for the new willingness of the United States to share with Britain the control of policy in the Middle East and the new note of compromise which has crept into our pronouncements on Palestine.

Unrestricted Immigration Should Be Granted

The New Republic says:

The Palestine problem really boils down to the question whether or not unrestricted immigration should be granted to the tortured, impoverished and starving Jews of Europe. A solution of this question cannot wait until protracted conference discussions have settled the political future of the British mandate. Unrestricted immigration, as we demanded in our issue of October 29, should be the order of the day.

Since that editorial was written, we have received a number of letters objecting to our statement that "the Zionists ill serve the cause of human decency when they raise the issue of Jewish nationalism and a Jewish state in Palestine." Why, these letters ask, does Zionism ill serve the cause of human decency? Our answer is that raising the political question of a Jewish state will seriously interfere with the task immediately at hand — unrestricted immigration. The events of the last weeks have borne out our fears in this respect.

We believe equally firmly that the Arabs and British ill serve the cause of human decency when they use, as they now do, the Jewish victims of Nazi brutalitarianism as a political football; the Arabs when they raise their own exclusive political demands; the British when they refuse to open the door to Palestine. Their claims, explanations and justifications have no moral validity in the face of the urgent need of finding a haven for the world's most pitilessly persecuted minority.

But because, in our eyes, the Arabs' nationalistic aspirations and Britain's empire politics are wrong, this does not mean that the Zionist demand for a Jewish state is right. From the liberal point of view, nationalism—the Zionists do not deny their nationalist objective—and sovereign independence are hardly adequate solutions in the modern world, regardless of whether they are advocated by nascent nationalists like the Zionists or articulate Arab elements, or by dying nationalists like our own isolationists or British imperialists.

If events in Palestine—and, for that matter, in Indonesia, China and the Balkans—teach us anything, it is that the time is more than ripe for collective action by the United Nations Organization to use its power by finding satisfactory solutions and maintaining international peace.

The Central Committee of Polish Jews has appealed to Jewish organizations abroad to do their utmost to supply Polish Jews with clothing as the Government, while "sparing no effort" to help the Jewish repatriates, cannot satisfy the enormous need for help.

A flat assertion that the Vatican never intended to baptize Jewish children sheltered in Catholic homes and institutions was officially made by the Vatican press in Italy, in a note to correspondents of foreign newspapers in Rome.

The Czech government has erected at Theresienstadt a monument to the tens of thousands of Jews who perished during the Nazi occupation. Representatives from all Czech kehillahs attended the ceremony.

SAY BRITISH

estine Administration's land transfer regulations based on the British White Paper of 1939 restricting Jewish immigration to that country, to go ahead with plans to buy the land they want for agricultural purposes. The land purchase program is under the auspices of the Jewish National Fund of America.

Dr. Abraham Granovsky, chairman of the board of directors of the World Jewish National Fund, said the goal of the organization was not less than 500,000 acres of land in Palestine to provide for a large farming population that in turn would help provide a livelihood for an additional 800,000 persons.

Dr. Granovsky estimated that the land acquisition would require an investment of $180,000,000 over a period of years, and that the money was expected to be made available by the donation income of the Jewish National Fund and by means of a public loan.

Dr. Silver, who is co-chairman of the American Zionist Emergency Council, declared that the proposed joint commission of inquiry into the Palestine problem was a disastrous substitute for action immediately imperative, and that its primary purpose was not to help the distressed Jews of Europe but to liquidate the Jewish national homeland. He warned that "we cannot be bound by the findings of any such commission," and said the executive committee of the World Zionist Organization would have to determine whether, in view of the palpable insincerity of the entire project, it could in any way co-operate with it.

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York, co-chairman of the American Zionist Emergency Council, criticised the British Government for not acceding to President Truman's suggestion that Prime Minister Attlee grant 100,000 certificates of admission to Palestine to displaced European Jews. Dr. Wise said he was opposed to violence against mandatory power, but added: "I urge the British Government not to use violence in enforcement of the Chamberlain-MacDonald White Paper."

Dr. Sidney Marks of Washington, in his report as executive secretary of the Zionist Organization of America, announced plans to increase the membership from the present 150,000 to 200,000. He announced also an expansion fund drive for $500,000 to finance major Zionist projects.

Widow Of Ex-Governor's Son Marries Orchestra Conductor

Mrs. Peggy Lashanska Rosenbaum Lehman, widow of Lieut. Peter Gerald Lehman, young Army Air Forces hero who was the eldest son of former Governor and Mrs. Herbert H. Lehman, of New York was married to Richard Kaye Korn, orchestral conductor, in the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Harold A. Rosenbaum, 660 Park Avenue, New York. Only immediate relatives were at the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Dr. Hyman Schachtel.

A profusion of autumn blossoms formed the floral setting for the wedding. The improvised altar in the living room was adorned with a simple arrangement of those blooms interspersed with delphinium, pale pink roses and snapdragons. The surrounding rooms also were decorated with autumn flowers.

The bride, daughter also of the late Mr. Rosenbaum, was escorted by her brother-in-law, James H. Elkus. Mr. Korn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raphael C. Korn, 480 Park Avenue, had his father for best man. A small family reception was given afterward. Mr. Korn and his bride went South on a wedding trip of about three weeks and will reside at 960 Park Avenue.

Mrs. Korn, whose mother for years has been known on the concert stage as Hulda Lashanska, was graduated from the Brearley School and attended Sarah Lawrence College. She was married to the former Governor's son in June, 1938, at Sherry's. There are two daughters of that union. Lieutenant Lehman was killed in March, 1944, during maneuvers in his fighter plane over his home base somewhere in England. He had served on fifty-seven missions and wore the Air Medal with three Oak Leaf Clusters. The Distinguished Flying Cross, which he won for extraordinary achievement, was presented posthumously to his widow in October, 1944, at ceremonies at Mitchel Field, L.I.

The bridegroom, who is conducting with the City Center Opera Company, joined the Coast Guard at the outbreak of the war, served three years, and last spring, as a lieutenant, received his honorable discharge. A grandson of Mrs. Charles Kaye, of New York and the late Mr. Kaye, banker, he is an alumnus of Princeton University, class of '38, and the Yale Law School, '41. He studied conducting under Serge Koussevitzky and Leon Barzin and then became a conductor with the National Orchestral Association.

an agency of the United States Government but for one set up by forty-four sovereign countries.

"For one nation's Legislature to attempt to govern it even in the most laudable of aims is to disavow the principle of international co-operation," he said. "I sincerely hope that the Senate will promptly recognize the responsibility of America to take the lead in genuine collaboration if the nations of the world are to work together as partners."

BRITISH SOLDIERS'

Seven United States Army Jewish sergeants on furlough in Palestine went to the Hadassah Hospital at Tel Aviv and offered to donate blood to the blood bank for riot casualties.

A clandestine broadcast in Hebrew, characterized the statement as "a great betrayal" and, after urging the Jews to fight, stated that "what Hitler did in his murderous blitz against the Jewish people is now being repeated in the form of a slow-grinding political policy by the democracies" in Palestine.

Then for the first time in recent weeks the "Voice of Israel" clandestine radio could not be heard. It was jammed just as it started a denunciation of British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin as anti-Jewish. It was assumed that the British authorities had decided to silence it to prevent incitement to disorder.

At the Haifa naval base, though there no rioting was reported, several hundred Jewish sailors of the British Navy did not appear for their pay and also remained away from barracks at lunch time in protest against British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin's Palestine speech in the House of Commons.

The Tel Aviv outbreak came toward the end of a noon-to-midnight Palestine-wide general strike by Jews in protest against immigration restrictions.

A list of 1,915 members of the underground Arab Nationalist party in Tripolitania has been discovered by the British authorities as a result of raids made on party centres during the recent anti-Jewish riots when twenty-three party leaders were arrested, seventeen of whom are still held for investigation.

Some British officials are convinced that the party, Hizb el Watani, seized on the riots as test of strength.

JEWISH STATE

As Mr. Bevin explained at his press conference, all but 2,000 of the 75,000 certificates called for by the White Paper have been used, but when those certificates are exhausted, 1,500 more each month will be granted.

The Arabs are being consulted about it now, Mr. Bevin said, adding that he felt confident that they would agree. A statement from the Arab Office in London regretted that the White Paper was being abandoned, but welcomed the statement that the problem of Palestine was being considered as distinct from a Jewish issue.

From Zionists and particularly the Jewish Agency, it was clear, Mr. Bevin expected criticism and he paid it back in advance. In talking with the correspondents he acknowledged his resentment over the way the Jewish Agency was trying to prevent the immigration certificates from being taken up, as he put it, "to make us change our policy in spite of the fact that people are suffering in Europe."

"The Jews have not even taken up the certificates," he said. "They are using it as political lever. It is most unfortunate."

Perhaps more than anything else, the Foreign Secretary, who said that he was staking his whole political career on solving the Palestine problem, stressed his opinion that the entire problem was racial. After he had made his statement in the House and first one member and then another had taken the side of the Jews or the Arabs, he made urgent appeals not to introduce racial feeling.

"I beg you at this crisis in the world's history not to pursue racial antagonisms," he said. "The most difficult thing to settle in this world is when racial antagonism arises.

"I am sure the House and Jewry, apart from the Zionist Organization, Jewry as a whole, is anxious to see a final solution. The Arabs are meeting me very well and I thank them for it."

In speaking with the American correspondents he also made the point that the "great problem is assimilation."

"A lot of these races form enclaves of their own," he went on, "and that is one of the things the world must get over. Assimilation is a vexing problem. All nations are frightened of racial developments within their States and the Jews therefore present a very difficult problem indeed."

As this statement indicates, the British want the whole problem put as a European and Middle Eastern humanitarian and Jewish problem, but not as simply a question of Palestine.

In fact, Mr. Bevin, both in Parliament and later, emphasized that Britain felt that Jews must not be driven from Europe, that they must continue to be allowed to give the benefits of their genius to European civilization and that they should be allowed to live where they are without discrimination if they so desire.

Palestine, says the statement, "does not by itself provide sufficient opportunity for grappling with the whole problem." From that point it goes on to considerations of international amity and world peace.

The joint Anglo-American Committee of Inquiry, which will have a rotating chairmanship, will examine questions of Palestine and European countries where Jews were victims of Nazism and Fascism. It will make investigations on the spot and consult Jews and Arabs. Then it will make recommendations to the United States and British Governments which will then have to be accepted, modified or rejected.

Mr. Bevin asserted that he felt sure the committee could be set up almost immediately, although he would not try to guess when recommendations would be ready. The recommendation will cover both an interim and a permanent solution, the latter being a trusteeship under the UNO.

When correspondents asked the Foreign Secretary whether he had a collective or single trusteeship in mind he said that Britain would accept whatever the committee recommended.

The sentence before the last one in Rabbi Stern's editorial on "Education", in last week's Review, should have read: "Yet, they are the guardians of our civilization, and if our society is to prove worthwhile, we must give honour and dignity and economic security to the teaching profession."

Mother aren't you glad we waited for "Wear-Ever"
GENUINE "Wear-Ever" is worth waiting for! During the war years we urged homemakers to give their "Wear-Ever" Aluminum Cooking Utensils proper care until our factory resumed production on new "Wear-Ever". We have commenced operations and are supplying utensils across Canada on a quota basis, until our plant can again reach its full, prewar volume of production. The "Wear-Ever" we are now making is of the same high quality that made this name popular in thousands of Canadian homes.
FOUNDATION EQUIPMENT of EFFICIENT KITCHENS
In the most efficient kitchens, "Wear-Ever" is selected for the foundation equipment. It is adopted as standard and effects many savings. In these standardized kitchens, fewer utensils, properly selected as to type and size, do the work. Cleaning operations are simplified. The "Wear-Ever" kitchen costs less to maintain, because these quality utensils last for a long time.
